Bennington Taxidermist Makes Specialty of Deer Heads

WORK AND INTERESTING PROCESS

Chelsea Harrington Has Private Museum of More Than a Thousand Specimens.

There are two kinds of buck fever. One is nerve-agitation at sight of the animal standing in plain view waiting his ticket on the New Jerusalem limited. The other is the successful hunter's disease of spirit caused by the delay while the taxidermist is mounting the head. The latter is not as fatal to the hunter as the former is to his vanity. But a mighty Nimrod afflicted with the latter is a rather unwelcome person to have kicking round the house.

There is one physician for the latter ailment in Bennington. His name is Chelsea Harrington and he lives on Safford street. He will take any deer, reasonably dead, and prevent the hunter "wasting away" by the delay in hanging the trophy on the walls of his den. Then he will promptly prevent the patient's relapse by submitting a moderate bill. This is not an advertisement for Chelsea Harrington because the deer season is closed and there are only two people in town who remember a year after what they saw in the Banner a year before. One is the man whose daughter's marriage got mixed up by the make-up man and came out under the head of "Business Opportunities."

CAPTURED BRITISH STEAMER REACHES NEWPORT NEWS

Appan, a German Prize, Makes Remarkable Voyage

CAUGHT OFF CANARY ISLANDS

Made Her Way to American Port Across Seas Patrolled by Hostile Warships.

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 1.—The British steamer Appan from some point on the African coast arrived off this port today in charge of a German prize crew.

The Appan was captured by a German sea raider off the Canary Islands. According to the stories told by passengers there was a bloody fight on the decks of the captured steamer in which two men were killed and a number were wounded.

With the flag of Great Britain down and the double eagle at her masthead the Appan made one of the most spectacular voyages in history.

The entire sea was patrolled by hostile warships but by avoiding the usual lanes of travel the Appan was brought in safely to this neutral port.

On board the steamer were 300 passengers, at least 30 of them women and children, in charge of a prize crew of 22. Under the rules of international law she will be allowed to remain in port but a short time unless she internes. It is believed she will intern.

Washington, Feb. 1.—That the Appan captured at least two enemy merchantmen after she became a German prize is a statement that appears in a report made by Collector Hamilton of Newport News and received by the government here today.

A Very Large Mine

There was once in Cripple Creek an old character named Burns. He was an old person who always, no matter what his work, wore what used to be called a "Prince Albert." He struck a rich vein of ore and named that the Prince Albert. Being of a generous and convivial disposition, this lucky fellow was, of course, surrounded by many self-seeking friends. When he and they were in their cups some of them, with an eye to the main chance, managed to wheedle out of Burns on one pretext or another a deed of a share in his mine. With royal prodigality he scattered deeds about among his retainers and camp followers until finally something had to be done, and he was taken into court. One of the lawyers had Burns on the stand. "Now, Mr. Burns," said the lawyer, "will you please tell the court how you can explain your conduct? The evidence shows that you have doled out twenty-nine twenty-fourths of your mine. What have you to say to that?" "Well, sir," replied the witness, "you must remember, sir, that the Prince Albert is a very large mine."

He Gave Him a Tip. One of the best tripping stories concerns an ancestor of Lord Durham, who always wore a rough coat made from the fleece of his own sheep. When a new doorkeeper in parliament refused to admit him he sat quietly down on a doorstep to wait the arrival of some one who could vouch for him. When this happened the doorkeeper became profuse in apology and then had the impudence to "hope your honor or will give me something to remember you by again." Lambton looked him up and down and then caught him a mighty blow. "Aye, lad," said he as he passed in, "I don't think ye'll forget old Lambton again."—London Standard.

Too Polite. "This is my coming out," remarked the facetious burglar, whose sentence had expired. "Permit me to wish you many happy returns," said the prison keeper gallantly.—New York Mail.

Has Been Put in Shape For Immediate War

Land Forces at Present Insufficient for Ordinary Duties in Time of Peace.

Chicago, Feb. 1.—The United States has made preparations for immediate war as far as the navy is concerned, although the present naval force is inadequate in size. President Wilson declared last night in an address before several thousand persons in the Auditorium. "We mean business," he said in speaking of the preparedness plans of the administration. "We have given to the present fleet of the United States an organization such as it never had before. I am told by Admiral Fletcher," the president said. "And we have made preparation for immediate war, so far as the navy is concerned. The army," the president said, "as at present constituted, is not large enough even for the ordinary duties of peace." The president repeated his warnings that no time must be lost in strengthening the defenses of the nation. He declared the government was doing everything it could for preparedness.

Rulers, not public opinion, brought about the present war, Mr. Wilson declared. "I thank God there is no man in the United States who has the authority to bring on war without the consent of the nation," he said.

"We are not now thinking of invasion of the territory of the United States," the president declared. "That is not what is making us think. We are not asking ourselves shall we be prepared only to defend our own homes and our own shores. It is that all we stand for. To keep the door shut securely against our enemies? What about the great trusteeship set up for liberty of the national government in the whole western hemisphere? We stand pledged to see that both continents of America are to be left free to be used by their people as those people choose to use them under a system of national popular sovereignty as absolutely unchallenged as our own."

Detailed plans for strengthening the army and navy, and the aviation corps, and for making munitions and armament by the government were outlined. The president spoke for nearly an hour.

Dr. Syntax.

On the English coast, at Land's End, there stands a curiously formed headland with a profile resembling that of a human face. It is supposed that once the rocky head was held proudly erect and could look out over the blue sea, but during some period of disturbance the huge boulder was thrown forward, so that now the forehead of the man rests against a neighboring rock. All these rugged and massive pieces bordering the coast are the granite. Locally the curious boulder is known as Dr. Syntax.

Guarded His Board.

As Sir Thomas More laid his head on the block he begged the executioner to wait a moment while he carefully placed his hand out of reach of the ax, for, he said, "it hath not committed treason," which reminds one of the story of Simon Lord Lovat, who the day before his execution on Tower hill bade the operator who shaved him be cautious not to cut his throat, as such an accident would cause disappointment to the gaping crowd on the morrow.—English Magazine.

PROHIBITION ABLY EXPOUNDED FOR FAITHFUL FEW

Ex-Governor Patterson Talked Well to Small Crowd

WANTS NATIONAL PROHIBITION

Says State Prohibition is Not Effective But is a Necessary Part of Program.

Ex-Governor Malcolm R. Patterson of Tennessee delivered an address in support of prohibition in Library hall Monday evening, the hall being about one third filled.

Because of the small number present, and also on account of the fact that Gov. Patterson had made the entire trip from Tennessee to Vermont within the previous 24 hours, he did not deliver his main temperance address advertised. He confined himself to a forty-minute talk on his personal experience with prohibition in Tennessee and other states, particularly in the south.

Rev. P. L. Dow acted as chairman of the meeting, introducing Gov. Patterson. Dr. Madison Swaden, Indiana, Gov. Patterson's traveling companion on this trip, who was scheduled to speak also, could not reach Bennington in time.

The point of Gov. Patterson's argument was that prohibition does prohibit if given time enough and that the national trend of public sentiment is against liquor interests and traffic. It is true, he stated, that abuses creep in, blind tigers and illegal saloons and dives open up especially in the larger cities. But lining up the different states, one at a time, against the liquor traffic by giving them strict prohibitory laws are steps in a great national uplift to wean the federal government from being a partner in the traffic by permitting its continuance so long as the government gets its share of the profit.

The moral effect of swinging whole states into line against the traffic taken from the viewpoint of a decade or a generation, more than counterbalances the momentary evils of temporary blind tigers or illegal saloons which spring up while the good work is being carried home.

The idea is, that once given a sufficient number of states on record as prohibitory, so that a majority of sentiment in the country is against the traffic, the prosecution of these illegal places will be carried on much as the mountain moonshine districts of the south.

It is difficult to get towns to enforce a prohibitory law because the inhabitants do not back up their officers with public sentiment and a law without public sentiment behind it, is no law whatever. Let a majority of the federal states go dry, so that the liquor supporters in this country are in the minority, and transgressors of the selling law will find themselves in as serious trouble as the southern mountaineers who are shot on sight if they attempt to offer resistance when sought by federal officers.

The speaker maintained this could not come without a great prohibitory movement uniting the entire country. The trouble, he stated, in any such reformatory law, is not in the law, but in getting it enforced. It must be enforced by some power higher than the local petty government and when it is, violation will be so serious that the states will have prohibition which really prohibits.

Gov. Patterson was chief executive of Tennessee when a prohibition measure came up in that state. He had always been a local option man, believing the discussion of the question once a year kept the issue alive. The Tennessee legislature passed a prohibitory law over his veto. Tennessee is not free from the liquor traffic any more than other states, but he stated that in the final summing up of benefits and evils resulting, he was convinced the results were in favor of prohibition, and he now supports prohibition.

The governor is a graphic and fluent talker. He goes from here to Rutland and Burlington where he will speak in support of the Perry bill, which is to be decided by referendum March 7.
